Dear Mr. Ashcroft:

As a supporter of Microsoft and common sense policies, I write you with concern over the recent developments in the settlement. Not only do I think that the entire process was ridiculous from the beginning, but to go even further and delay the settlement after three years of negotiations is too much. This settlement is part of a very well thought out process and should be enforced immediately. Further litigation will only force our technology industry to fall behind in the global market.

As our economy continues to dip, we need to support our technology industry in any way possible. By supporting this settlement, we allow our technology industry to further focus on innovation. Microsoft has done their part to make drastic changes for this settlement, and now it is our turn. Some of the changes agreed upon are in licensing, marketing and even design. All of which are beneficial to our IT sector as a whole. This is certainly why we need to help support the settlement and get our technology industry back to business.

Please help to stop any further action against this agreement. Let us help support the IT sector and get us back in gear.

As a Nation, we have to move on to more pressing matters and stop beating a "dead Horse". Enough is enough

Sincerely,

John Galli
